If you have confidence, that means you believe in yourself and in what you can accomplish. Confidence can help you speak in front of a group, meet new people, or make difficult choices. Real confidence comes from within. Still, as Gary Soto expresses in “The Jacket,” outside pressures can sometimes bring you down.

LIST IT Brainstorm with a small group of classmates to make a list of the kinds of experiences that can build confidence. Then identify some ways that a person’s confidence can be damaged.

LITERARY ANALYSIS: SIMILES AND METAPHORS

Personal narratives allow writers to share their experiences with readers. As in fiction, nonfiction writers use descriptive language and literary devices such as similes and metaphors. A simile is a comparison of two things that uses the word like or as. A metaphor is a comparison of two things that does not use like or as. Writers often use such comparisons to reveal their emotions and attitudes toward the subjects they are writing about. For example, look at the following simile from “The Jacket”:

I stared at the jacket, like an enemy, thinking bad things . . .

The simile “like an enemy” reveals Soto’s anger toward the jacket. Look for other similes and metaphors as you read and notice what they help you understand.

READING STRATEGY: SUMMARIZE

One way to check your understanding of a work is to summarize it. A good summary provides a brief retelling of the main ideas. It uses your own words, but does not include your opinions, or personal views, about the subject. As you read “The Jacket,” record the key events of the story in a log like the one below. Make sure you maintain the same meaning and a logical order in your notes.

Key Events

- The narrator asks his mother for a black leather jacket.

VOCABULARY IN CONTEXT

Gary Soto uses the boldfaced words to help tell about a jacket he hated. To see how many you know, replace each boldfaced word with a word or phrase that means the same thing.

1. Gary Soto remembers looking at his profile in the mirror, hoping to look cool in his new jacket.
2. He spun each arm like a propeller to see how silly the jacket looked.
3. Eventually the jacket began to shrivel and no longer fit.
4. Soto remembers the vicious thoughts he had about it.

Discovering Writing

Gary Soto was planning to study geography in college. Then, while browsing in the poetry section of his school library, he discovered a collection of modern poetry. “I thought, wow, wow, wow,” Soto recalls. “I wanted to do this thing.”

Poetry of His Own

Soto published his first book of poetry in 1976. Many of his poems are about Mexican Americans living and working in U.S. cities or working as migrant farm laborers. To create the lively, poetic images in his writing, he often draws upon childhood memories of growing up in a Mexican-American community in Fresno, California.

Fresno Boy

Soto understands the effect of poverty on children. His father died in a work accident when Soto was five, and the family’s small income improved only a little when his mother remarried. Soto’s personal experiences of having to do without many things comes through in much of his writing, including “The Jacket.”

The Jacket

Gary Soto

My clothes have failed me.

I remember the green coat that I wore in fifth and sixth grades when you either danced like a champ or pressed yourself against a greasy wall, bitter as a penny toward the happy couples.

When I needed a new jacket and my mother asked what kind I wanted, I described something like bikers wear: black leather and silver studs¹ with enough belts to hold down a small town. We were in the kitchen, steam on the windows from her cooking. She listened so long while stirring dinner that I thought she understood for sure the kind I wanted. The next day when I got home from school, I discovered draped on my bedpost a jacket the color of day-old guacamole.² I threw my books on the bed and approached the jacket slowly, as if it were a stranger whose hand I had to shake. I touched the vinyl sleeve, the collar, and peeked at the mustard-colored lining. ◆

◆ GRAMMAR IN CONTEXT

Reread lines 13–14. Notice that Soto correctly uses commas to separate his list of the different parts of the jacket that the narrator touched.

1. studs: small ornamental metal buttons mounted on fabric.

2. guacamole (gwä'kə-mō'lē): a thick paste made from avocados, citrus juice, onions, and seasoning, often served as a dip.

From the kitchen mother yelled that my jacket was in the closet. I closed the door to her voice and pulled at the rack of clothes in the closet, hoping the jacket on the bedpost wasn't for me but my mean brother. No luck. I gave up. From my bed, I stared at the jacket. I wanted to cry because it was so ugly and so big that I knew I'd have to wear it a long time. I was a 20 small kid, thin as a young tree, and it would be years before I'd have a new one. I stared at the jacket, like an enemy, thinking bad things before I took off my old jacket whose sleeves climbed halfway to my elbow.

I put the big jacket on. I zipped it up and down several times, and rolled the cuffs up so they didn't cover my hands. I put my hands in the pockets and flapped the jacket like a bird's wings. I stood in front of the mirror, full face, then profile, and then looked over my shoulder as if someone had called me. I sat on the bed, stood against the bed, and combed my hair to see what I would look like doing something natural. I looked ugly. I threw it on my brother's bed and looked at it for a long time before I slipped it on 30 and went out to the backyard, smiling a "thank you" to my mom as I passed her in the kitchen. With my hands in my pockets I kicked a ball against the fence, and then climbed it to sit looking into the alley. I hurled orange peels at the mouth of an open garbage can and when the peels were gone I watched the white puffs of my breath thin to nothing. A

I jumped down, hands in my pockets, and in the backyard on my knees I teased my dog, Brownie, by swooping my arms while making bird calls. He jumped at me and missed. He jumped again and again, until a tooth sunk deep, ripping an L-shaped tear on my left sleeve. I pushed Brownie away to study the tear as I would a cut on my arm. There was no blood, 40 only a few loose pieces of fuzz. Dumb dog, I thought, and pushed him away hard when he tried to bite again. I got up from my knees and went to my bedroom to sit with my jacket on my lap, with the lights out.

That was the first afternoon with my new jacket. The next day I wore it to sixth grade and got a D on a math quiz. During the morning recess Frankie T., the playground terrorist, pushed me to the ground and told me to stay there until recess was over. My best friend, Steve Negrete, ate an apple while looking at me, and the girls turned away to whisper on the monkey bars.³ The teachers were no help: they looked my way and talked about how foolish I looked in my new jacket. I saw their heads bob with 50 laughter, their hands half-covering their mouths. B

Even though it was cold, I took off the jacket during lunch and played kickball in a thin shirt, my arms feeling like braille⁴ from goose bumps. But when I returned to class I slipped the jacket on and shivered until I was warm. I sat on my hands, heating them up, while my teeth chattered like a cup of crooked dice. Finally warm, I slid out of the jacket but a few minutes later put it back on when the fire bell rang. We paraded out into the yard where we, the sixth graders, walked past all the other grades to stand against the back fence. Everybody saw me. Although they didn't say out loud, "Man, that's ugly," I heard the buzz-buzz of gossip and even 60 laughter that I knew was meant for me.

And so I went, in my guacamole-colored jacket. So embarrassed, so hurt, I couldn't even do my homework. I received Cs on quizzes, and forgot the state capitals and the rivers of South America, our friendly neighbor. Even the girls who had been friendly blew away like loose flowers to follow the boys in neat jackets. **◻

I wore that thing for three years until the sleeves grew short and my forearms stuck out like the necks of turtles. All during that time no love came to me—no little dark girl in a Sunday dress she wore on Monday.

◻ SIMILES AND METAPHORS

Identify the simile in lines 64–65. How does this simile help you understand Soto's frustration?

At lunchtime I stayed with the ugly boys who leaned against the chainlink 70 fence and looked around with propellers of grass spinning in our mouths.
We saw girls walk by alone, saw couples, hand in hand, their heads like bookends pressing air together. We saw them and spun our propellers so fast our faces were blurs.

I blame that jacket for those bad years. I blame my mother for her bad taste and her cheap ways. It was a sad time for the heart. With a friend I spent my sixth-grade year in a tree in the alley, waiting for something good to happen to me in that jacket, which had become the ugly brother who tagged along wherever I went. And it was about that time that I began to grow. My chest puffed up with muscle and, strangely, 80 a few more ribs. Even my hands, those fleshy hammers, showed bravely through the cuffs, the fingers already hardening for the coming fights.
But that L-shaped rip on the left sleeve got bigger, bits of stuffing coughed out from its wound after a hard day of play. I finally Scotch-taped it closed, but in rain or cold weather the tape peeled off like a scab and more stuffing fell out until that sleeve shriveled into a palsied arm.⁵ That winter the elbows began to crack and whole chunks of green began to fall off. I showed the cracks to my mother, who always seemed to be at the stove with steamed-up glasses, and she said that there were children in Mexico who would love that jacket. I told her that this was America and 90 yelled that Debbie, my sister, didn't have a jacket like mine. I ran outside, ready to cry, and climbed the tree by the alley to think bad thoughts and watch my breath puff white and disappear.

D SUMMARIZE

What does the narrator blame the jacket for? Use your log to summarize the key events that contributed to his feelings about the jacket.

But whole pieces still casually flew off my jacket when I played hard, read quietly, or took vicious spelling tests at school. When it became so spotted that my brother began to call me “camouflage,” I flung it over the fence into the alley. Later, however, I swiped the jacket off the ground and went inside to drape it across my lap and mope. D

I was called to dinner: steam silvered my mother's glasses as she said grace;⁶ my brother and sister with their heads bowed made ugly faces at 100 their glasses of powdered milk. I gagged too, but eagerly ate big rips of buttered tortilla that held scooped-up beans. Finished, I went outside with my jacket across my arm. It was a cold sky. The faces of clouds were piled up, hurting. I climbed the fence, jumping down with a grunt. I started up the alley and soon slipped into my jacket, that green ugly brother who breathed over my shoulder that day and ever since.  E

E SIMILES AND METAPHORS

Reread lines 104–105. What does the metaphor there help Soto to convey?

5. palsied (pól'zēd) arm: a paralyzed or weakened arm.

6. grace: a short prayer or blessing said before or after a meal.

READING 7 Identify the literary language and devices used in personal narratives. 10A Summarize the main ideas and supporting details in text, demonstrating an understanding that a summary does not include opinions. RC-6(E) Summarize texts in ways that maintain meaning and logical order within a text.

Comprehension

- 1. Recall How did the jacket become ripped?
- 2. Clarify Reread lines 104–105. What does Soto mean when he calls his jacket an “ugly brother who breathed over my shoulder”?
- 3. Summarize Why is Soto disappointed by his sixth-grade year?

Literary Analysis

- 4. Compare and Contrast What are the similarities and differences between the jacket Soto asked for and the one he received? Explain how what he wanted affected his attitude toward what he got.
- 5. Summarize Use your log to write a one paragraph summary of the events in Soto’s personal narrative. Remember that summaries do not include opinions, or personal views. Make sure you maintain the same order and meaning as the original text.
- 6. Identify Symbol A symbol is a person, place, thing, or activity that stands for something beyond itself. What might Soto’s jacket symbolize? Use details from the essay to support your answer.
- 7. Analyze the Effects of Simile and Metaphor Create a chart like the one shown to gather similes and metaphors Soto uses in “The Jacket.” What overall tone, or attitude toward the jacket, do these comparisons convey? What else do they contribute to the essay?

Simile	Basic Description	Positive or Negative
“I stared at the jacket, like an enemy” (line 21)	he stared meanly or cautiously at it	negative

- 8. Evaluate Reread lines 61–74. Do you agree with Soto that the jacket is responsible for his “bad years”? Give examples from the essay to support your answer.

Extension and Challenge

- 9. Reader’s Circle In a small group, discuss the ways in which Soto’s attitude might have made wearing the jacket seem worse than it actually was. What could he have done to overcome the effects of the jacket?

What builds CONFIDENCE?

With a group of classmates, reread lines 43–50. Take turns discussing the effect the jacket had on Soto’s confidence.

Vocabulary in Context

▲ VOCABULARY PRACTICE

Use context clues to choose the vocabulary word that best completes each sentence.

1. The airplane made an emergency landing when its _____ broke.
2. It was sad to see my favorite sweater _____ and shrink with each wash.
3. I know he was upset, but he didn't need to be so _____.
4. Many portraits show only the person's _____, not the whole face.

ACADEMIC VOCABULARY IN WRITING

• aspect • distinctive • interpret • perceive • sensory

Write a paragraph discussing Soto's use of personification and descriptive language in "The Jacket." Look for distinctive phrases such as "day-old guacamole" and "green ugly brother," and vivid verbs such as "paraded" and "silvered." How does Soto's use of memorable words and phrases affect the way you perceive the jacket? Use at least two Academic Vocabulary words in your response.

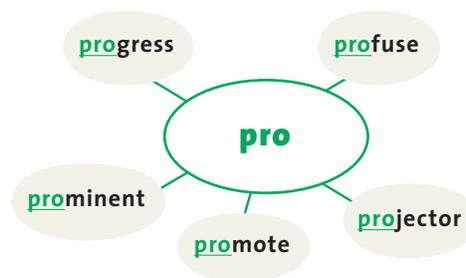

READING 2A Determine the meaning of grade-level academic English words derived from Latin affixes.

VOCABULARY STRATEGY: THE LATIN ROOT pro

The vocabulary words profile and propellers both contain the Latin root pro, which means "forth" or "forward." You can find the word root pro combined with other roots and base words in many English words. When you come across an unfamiliar word containing pro, use context clues, as well as your knowledge of the root, to figure out the meaning.

PRACTICE Choose the word from the web that best completes each sentence. Use a dictionary if necessary. Then explain how the root pro helps give meaning to each word.

1. After five years, the company decided to _____ him from assistant to manager.
2. We couldn't see the movie because the _____ wasn't working.
3. His _____ and detailed thank-you note was four pages long!
4. They were pleased to make such good _____ on their report.
5. He has become a very _____ man since running for town mayor.

Conventions in Writing

◆ GRAMMAR IN CONTEXT: Use Commas Correctly

When writing a sentence that includes a list of three or more items, use commas to help make the sentence’s meaning clear. Place commas after every item in a series except the last item. To separate two or more adjectives describing the same noun, use a comma after all but the last adjective.

Original: Soto remembers the embarrassment sadness and awkwardness of having an ugly jacket.

Revised: Soto remembers the embarrassment, sadness, and awkwardness of having an ugly jacket.

PRACTICE Insert commas where needed in the following sentences.

1. His mother bought cheap sturdy and practical clothes for the kids.
2. He uses humorous vivid familiar images to describe the jacket’s ugliness.
3. The jacket resulted in poor grades no girlfriend and ugly friends for Soto.
4. Thinking of the jacket brings back memories of poverty disappointments and loneliness.

For more help with commas, see page R49 in the Grammar Handbook.
